15. Multidisciplinary / interdisciplinary

At the Ewing Christian College, interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary approaches are becoming increasingly important in college work, as they allow students to develop a broader understanding of complex issues and problems. We recognize the importance of interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary approaches and are incorporating them into the curriculum in various ways.

In the absence of Honors courses, the college offers a variety of courses to both students in the arts and sciences which they are free to choose to make their combinations. In this way, the students are exposed to a variety of knowledge systems. We also run courses such as environmental studies, biophysics, biotechnology, and microbiology that invite our students to study multiple disciplines to seek solutions to complex problems.

Through the compulsory AEC (Ability Enhancement Courses) and SEC (Skill Enhancement Courses) the college further pushes the students to pursue realms of knowledge that may lie outside their disciplinary choices. The college also runs a host of certificate courses through which students are free to explore their personal and professional ambitions.

16. Academic bank of credits (ABC):

The University Grants Commission with the concurrence of Ministry of Education had notified "The University Grants Commission (Establishment and Operation of Academic Bank of Credits in Higher Education) Regulations, 2021" in the Gazette of India on 28 th July, 2021. The Academic Bank of Credits (ABC) platform has been developed by the National e- Governance Division (NeGD) of Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology (MeitY) under DigiLocker framework. Academic Bank of Credits (ABC) will digitally store the academic credits earned by students from higher education institutions registered with ABC, for awarding degree/Diploma /Certificates taking into account credits earned by students.

Following the directives of the University Grant Commission for successful implementation and to enhance the reach of the ABC programme, Ewing Christian College, being an autonomous institute has successfully adapted the ABC with registered National Academic Depository ID number NAD014558 and has appointed Lieutenant Dr. Amitabh Shad as the Nodal Officer of Academic Bank of Credits on behalf of the college.

For further details and registration in ABC students may visit the official website: <https://www.abc.gov.in/about.php>

17.Skill development:

Ewing Christian College offers a variety of Skill Enhancement Courses (SEC) with the aim to hone the skills that are crucial for students to succeed in their professional and personal lives, providing students with life-skills in the hands-on mode to increase their employability. Mandated by the University Grants Commission, Skill Enhancement Courses provide the opportunity and knowledge for an individual to develop and strengthen the necessary skills to gain, maintain, and advance in a chosen area. They are focused around training that combines the best practices from education, psychology, social work, career counselling, sports, and technology training. Graduates of our region are pathetically way behind in basic skills required as compared to the industry standard. As educators it is our prime responsibility to provide our students such educational programs, which will develop the industry required basic skill in them. Ewing Christian College imparts life skills as well as technical and professional skills as part of holistic education and initiates measures at all levels to provide necessary infrastructure and environment for this serious pursuit. With a view to add value to the degree program at the undergraduate level, the College offers following Certificate programs of two Credits compulsorily for the students taking admission in the College.

18.Appropriate integration of Indian Knowledge system (teaching in Indian Language, culture, using online course)

The Indian knowledge system is a rich and diverse source of knowledge that has been developed over thousands of years. The college recognizes the importance of integrating the Indian knowledge system into its curriculum to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of the world and prepare them for future careers.

One way in which Ewing Christian College is integrating the Indian knowledge system is through the creation of courses that focus on Indian philosophy, literature, and culture. These courses provide students with an understanding of the historical and cultural context of India and its contributions to the world. For example, a course on Indian literature in English Studies may focus on the works of famous Indian authors such as Raja Rao, R K Narayan, and A K Ramanujan. All the departments of Ewing Christian College, especially the Humanities and Social Sciences offer courses that have a compulsory component of India and Indianness. These methods are designed to engage students and provide them with a deeper understanding of the subject matter. For example, a class on Indian philosophy may use storytelling to explain complex concepts such as karma and dharma.

19.Focus on Outcome based education (OBE):Focus on Outcome based education (OBE):

In recent years, the emphasis on outcome-based education has become significant in the area of education. To ensure quality outcomes and ongoing improvement, the shift from a content-driven curriculum to an outcome-based curriculum is considered as a work in progress.

The shift to outcome-based education is highlighting opportunities and problems that need additional investigation. A feature of outcome-based education is its emphasis on "success for all." This indicates that the goal of the educational system is to guarantee that every student demonstrates the requisite skills and achieves the desired results. The move to outcome-based education must include defining graduate outcome goals and aligning curriculum to meet these goals.

A more comprehensive approach to teaching and learning is made possible by the switch to a competency-based educational system. In order for pupils to flourish in the real world, it places a high priority on the development of particular skills, knowledge, and talents. Based on the abilities that students should be able to exhibit at the conclusion of their educational program, curricular decision-making in outcome-based education is conducted. This strategy determines curriculum content and organization, teaching methods and strategies, courses offered, educational atmosphere, and assessment strategies. Outcome-based education makes sure that students have the information, abilities, morals, and values needed to succeed in their chosen fields by concentrating on the desired results.

20.Distance education/online education:

Distance education and online education have become increasingly prominent in the field of learning, with the development of Internet technologies and the recent global shift towards remote teaching and learning. The COVID-19 pandemic has accelerated the adoption of online education as a necessary means to ensure uninterrupted schooling for students around the world. This rapid digitalization and the implementation of emergency remote teaching practices have not only highlighted the potential risks and challenges, but also the benefits and opportunities of inclusive and equitable education. As we look towards the future, it is clear that distance education and online learning will continue to shape the landscape of higher education. The combination of online and offline forms of teaching and learning will likely become a new normal, particularly in times of future pandemics or emergencies.

CURRICULAR ASPECTS
1.1 - Curriculum Design and Development
1.1.1 - Curricula developed and implemented have relevance to the local, national, regional and global developmental needs which are reflected in Programme Outcomes (POs), Programme Specific Outcomes (PSOs) and Course Outcomes (COs) of the various Programmes offered by the Institution.
The designed curricula run at the institution aims to respond to the existing local and global needs. Most programmes foreground issues of poverty, health, mental well-being, climate change, water, sanitation, etc. We regularly receive students' feedback on course outcomes and teaching, which allows us to assess the ways in which the programmes can be restructured to specifically pay attention to key issues of global development. To cite an example in the curriculum, over the years the English programme has shown to be inclusive of indigenous writing practices and we offer works written in numerous Indian languages to our students and they are able to better connect with and understand their local and regional realities. Similarly, environment, gender, and climate change have emerged as key issues in many of our disciplines such as Geography, Political Science, and so on, while food security and inequality attains centre-stage in Economics and even Literature. Needless to say, the sciences too promote teaching and research of the same needs and issues of global development.

In 2004, to curb external influence and violence on the campus, the form of the student representation was changed from the directly elected presidential form of student union to indirectly elected presidential form based on the electoral college formed on the pattern of parliamentary form of government. This led to the inauguration of the Student Council in 2005, which stamped out undesirable external influence on student politics and gave opportunity to students to elect their representatives without fear or favour. The positive outcomes of this process of election was that unlike in the previous case, when students used to take out processions all over the city, disturbing civil society in the process, they were constrained to now canvassing within the college and the focus of the election process shifted to internal academic and policy matters. Unfortunately, due to COVID, the election for the student council this year could not be held.
